MR. BERESFORD-HOPE.

Since the name of Mr. Mr. Beresford-Hope is likely to be henceforth a "household word" in Virginia in connection with the Stonewall Jackson statue a few particulars respecting him may not be unacceptable to our Alexander James Beresford Beresford-Hope is the youngest son of the late Thomas Hope, esq., a wealthy banker, and author of Anastatius, a book of considerable celebrity. His mother was a daughter of De la Poer Beresford Lord Decies and Archbishop of Tuam, and after the death of Mr. Thomas Hope, she was married to Viscount Berestord.

Mr. Beresford-Hope was born on the 25th of January, 1820, and was educated at Harrow School, where he won a scholar-hip and numous prizes. In 1844 he proceeded to the degree of Master of Arts, in 1848 was made a D. C. L. of Oxtord, and in 1864 au LL D. of Cambridge. In 1842 Mr. Hope married Lady Mildred Cecil. daughter of the Marquis of Salisbury, by whom he has a numerous family.

During the American civil war Mr. Beresford-Hope was a firm and loyal friend to the Southern States. He was chairman of the Southern Independence Association, and by purse, pen, and speech liberally aided the Confederacy. When Stonewall Jackson died he became chairman of the committee of noblemen and gentlemen organized in London for the purpose of raising a statue of the immortal hero in Richmond, the capital of the Confederate States. That statue, the handiwork of Foley, one of England's greatest sculptors, will forever testify to the sympathy felt for the Southern States in Great Britain.

As the inheritor of his step-father, Viscount Beresford's English estates, Mr. Hope by royal liceuse prefixed the name of Beresford to his paternal patronymic. The Hope family are the Hopes so famous in the annals of banking. Their principal backing house is still im Amsterdam, and next to the Ro'hschilds they are greatest among financiers. Possessing a splen-did fortune, Mr. Beresterd-Hope will hereafter be remembered as a munificent pairon of the fine arts, a devoted Churchman, and a liberal supporter of benevolent movements. In appearance he is stout and well built, and forcibly reminds one of Macaulay's description of the strut burghers who accompanied William of Orange when he landed in England. As a speaker he is fluent and lengthy, bers brisk and bustling .- Farmville Mercury.

"DON'T TELL FATHER." -- There is many a good mother who plans the ruin of the child she dearly loves; teaches it the first lesson in wrong doing, by simply saying, "Now don't tell father." Surely mothers do it thoughtlessly, ignorantly, not considering that it is a first lesson in deception.

It is not at all strange that gamblers, and liars, and thieves, and hypocrites, and distrustful, evil minded people abound, when weak, loving mothers, with honeyed words and caresses, sweeten the little teaching that soon ripen into all kinds of meanness and upprincipled ras-

I heard a kind, well meaning mother say to the puny baby in her arms, "Well, birdie shall have its good candy everyday, but papa shan't know it; see how he loves it!' and the little thing whose reach of life had not a whole winter in it yet, snatched at the bright red and blue colored poison, and made as many glad motions as though it took its whole body to suck it with. The poor little thing had been fed on candy, almost, and fretted for more whenever us mouth was not filled. Even the nourishment nature had provided did not wholly satisfy it, for it was not as sweet as candy.

I thought it was no wonder, if children were taught, even in babyhood, that papa was bad, and ugly and unkind, that in youth they should call him a 'snob' and the 'old man,' and the mother whom they had learned by experience had no stability of character, and was capable of deception, it is not strange they should so little respect her as to call her the 'old woman.'

The father may be a stern man, rigid in his way of bringing up children, but he has a heart somewhere, and surely truthful, honest, loving words from his own child will find that warm place. So it is best never to deceive him in anything, but keep his confidence whole and unshaken, and the whiteness of the soul unstained by that loathsome sin, deception.

My soul sickened at the idea of a wife daring to teach her children to. disobey their father; of the daughter, vain and upprincipled with such a mother to teach and guide her. Better for the world she had never been MARRIED IN THE SNOW. - A writer tells a story of a runaway couple who reached the parson's house in the dead of night, when the snow lay on the ground and the winter winds howled an anthem for the wedding march. They succeeded in arousing the parson, who had been soughy tucked in his warm bed for several hours. The good man reluctantly raised the window and asked "who was there?" With chattering teeth the would-be bride kroom announced his errand. Not even the proof announced his errand. Not even the porty of the person prevented his uttering a law impatient growls at this unseasonable inplety of the person prevented his uttering a terruption of his dreams. He did not tarry to put on the wedding or any other garment, but in thundering tones ordered the shivering couple to stand well off in the moonlight and clasp hands. Then he demanded their names. John Williams," he said, "do you swear in the presence of God, as you will answer in the day of judgment, that you will take Eliza Catherine to be your own, your true and only wife, and that you will freeze to her so long you both shall live?" The promise was given, but the cold was growing so intense that the lady was spared the question that had been given to and answered by the man. "I pronounce you man and wife, and the biggest fools I have ever bet," concluded this brief and all-sufficient ceremony. The banging of the closing window lutimated to the loving pair that they had bothing more to expect from that quarter, and they soon disappeared, wondering at the strangebess of the situatioo, and doubtful if they were as much married as they might have been under more tavorable circumstances.

An elderly lady, who, with her daughter, had just returned from a rather rapid journey through France, part of Germany and Italy, his asked the other day if they had visite Rome, and she replied in the negative. "La, the place where we bought the bad stockings."
